HISTORICAL NOTE

In March 1871, the United States Government authorized the establishment of a military camp at the Red Cloud Agency on the White River. Home of some 13,000 Indians, the agency was one of the most troublesome spots on the Plains. The camp was named Camp Robinson in honor of Lt. Levi H. Robinson, who had been killed by Indians the previous month. In May 1874, the camp was relocated west of the agency and in June 1878 was officially designated Fort Robinson.

Between 1876 and 1890, Fort Robinson played an active role in the Indian Wars. In May of 1877, Crazy Horse surrendered at Fort Robinson and was killed there on September 5, 1877, while resisting imprisonment in the post guardhouse. The following year, Cheyenne Indians led by Chief Dull Knife escaped from their reservation in the Indian Territory and a group of some 150 were finally captured by troops from Fort Robinson. Imprisoned in a cavalry barracks, the Cheyenne refused to return to the Indian Territory and attempts were made to starve them into submission. Finally, on the night of January 9, 1879, the Cheyenne escaped and began a running fight with the Fort Robinson garrison. During the next two weeks, troops from the fort pursued the Indians in the nearby Butte country, and finally killed or captured the last of them on January 22nd, 1879.

During the 1880's, Fort Robinson reverted to garrison life and in 1885 the Ninth Cavalry, an all Negro unit, arrived to occupy the post. During this time, the Fort was enlarged and military training was a major activity. With the advent of the Ghost Dance religion among the Sioux in 1890, troops from Fort Robinson served in a campaign which culminated in the Battle of Wessels, H. W. (Henry W.) Jr.

Wounded Knee on December 29, 1891. Following this, the last major battle of the Indian wars, the Fort was garrisoned by the Tenth, Eighth, and Twelfth Cavalries. During the First World War activity at the Fort was reduced due to the demand for troops to serve in Europe.

In 1919, Fort Robinson became a quartermaster remount depot which eventually became the largest such facility in the world. Thousands of horses and mules were bred and trained for use by the Army, and remount stallions were distributed to breeders throughout the area greatly improving the local stock. The fort was also the home of the Fourth Field Artillery Battalion from 1928-1932, and during the Second World War became the site of a K-9 corps training center and a German prisoner-of-war camp. In 1948-1949, Fort Robinson was de-activated as a military post and the reservation became a beef cattle research station operated by the United States Department of Agriculture. Today, in addition to being a beef cattle research station, Fort Robinson is a Nebraska State Park. The University of Nebraska and the State Historical Society both operate branch museums at the Fort, and it is jointly administered with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection is comprised of original and microfilmed records relating to the history and administration of the fort as well as original and microfilmed drawings of fort buildings and structures. The collection is divided into 11 subgroups: 1) Records on microfilm, 1874-1940; 2) Livestock Records (Vet Hospital), 1923-1949; 3) Personnel Records, 1936-1948; 4) Administrative Records, 1876-1964; 5) Licenses, Leases and Agreements, 1885-1949; 6) Remount Depot, 1919-1945; 7) Prisoner-of-War Camp, 1944-1947; 8) Fire Station, 1844-1946; 9) War Dog Training Camp, 1943-1946; 10) Historical Records, 1874-1949; and 11) Building Records, 1884-1998.

Records relate to the history of Fort Robinson, Nebraska, 1874-1949. The first Subgroup consists of microfilm copies of official records held by the National Archives and Records Service. These records relate to general military affairs and activities at Fort Robinson, 1874-1929 and include material relative to troop strength, hospital records, post orders and returns, and to military campaigns. The microfilm was copied from various collections held by the National Archives including RG98, Records of the United States Army Commands; RG94, Records of the Office of the Adjutant General; RG120, Records of the A.E.F.; and RG393, Records of the U.S. Army Continental Commands.

Subgroups Two thru Nine consist of 19 boxes of archival material relating to the operation of Fort Robinson, 1874-1949. The bulk of this material covers the period 1930-1948 during the time that the fort was Quartermaster's remount depot and a war dog training center. Included are remount stallion records, personnel records, War Dog training manuals, and general administrative records. Included is an original guard report book, 1877-1878.

Subgroup Ten includes historical records collected and preserved regarding the early history of Fort Robinson.

Subgroup Eleven includes all building and structure records relating to the Fort, 1874-1947. Included are two volumes on microfilm containing a complete building inventory of the fort, 1905-1942, with photographs of salvaged, destroyed, or existing buildings kept by the U.S. War Department. The original volumes are housed in the Archives. This subgroup also includes building drawings on microfiche, located in the East Reference Room of the Historical Society, and many oversize drawings relating to construction at the fort. An inventory of these drawings follows the regular collection inventory. Some drawings and additional historical material are located at the Fort Robinson museum. Copies of the microfilm can also be found there.

The microfilmed portions of this collection were selected from the National Archives by James C. Olson in 1955. Additional microfilm was purchased by the State Archives. The structure inventory volumes of Subgroup Eleven were microfilmed by the Historical Society in 1968.

One box of correspondence for the remount depot was accessioned in 2007.
