Biographical Note

William H. James, the son of Isaac E. and Betsy Bates. James was born at Marion, Ohio on October 15, 1831. He was educated in the common schools and later engaged in farming, clerking and reading law. In 1853, James moved to Des Moines, Iowa where he joined the firm of Bates and Finch. In 1855 he was admitted to the Iowa bar and moved to Sergeants Bluffs, Iowa where he established a legal practice.

William H. James was married to Louisa Epler of Marion, Ohio on February 12, 1857 and moved to Dakota County, Nebraska where he had filed on a claim. The couple had three daughters and one son. James became active in political and civic affairs and was among the first trustees and aldermen of Dakota City. In 1860, he served as Justice of the Peace for Dakota Precinct and was elected county attorney in 1861 and 1863. The following year, he was an appointed register of the Dakota County Land Office by President Lincoln, a position he held for five years.

In 1870, William H. James was elected Secretary of State on the Republican ticket in Nebraska's first state election. The following year, Governor David Butler was impeached and removed from office and James assumed the duties of acting Governor, a post which he held until January 13, 1873. During James' administration, controversy was often prevalent between the governor and the legislature. The years 1871-1873 saw the organization of several counties by the legislature, including Webster, Franklin, Adams, Dawson, Greeley, Harlan and others. Governor James was often called upon to arbitrate disputed elections and appoint various officers to the various established governmental organizations of counties.

Upon leaving the governor's office, James moved to West Point, Nebraska and remained until October of 1877. Upon his appointment a register of the Land Office in Colfax, Washington, James left Nebraska and took up a homestead at Washington. He remained there until his death Feb. 1, 1920.
