HISTORICAL NOTE

Hamilton County, located in south central Nebraska, was organized and its boundaries were defined by a proclamation of Governor David Butler on March 13, 1870. Accordingly, the first county officials were elected and Orville City was declared the county seat by an election held in early May 1870 at the home of John Harris, an early settler. The courthouse was constructed in May of 1872 and was the first building in Orville City. The county seat remained at Orville City until an election held January 1, 1876 moved the site to Aurora, Nebraska. The transferral was a result of three bitter elections.

Hamilton County was named for Alexander Hamilton (1757-1804), United States Secretary of the Treasury under President George Washington.
