HISTORICAL NOTE

Sheridan County, originally a part of Sioux County, is located in the northern panhandle of Nebraska. The earliest pioneers to reach the area was in 1873 when the Spotted Tail Indian Agency was established near Brule Sioux Chief Spotted Tails camp. In 1874, an army post was established for the protection of the agency. This camp was named after General Philip H. Sheridan, the commander of the military division of the Missouri. When Spotted Tail's band moved on, the camp closed in 1881. The U. S. Government then opened up 18,225 acres of military lands to settlers.

In July of 1885, Governor Dawes officially proclaimed Sheridan County as separate from Sioux County. The county was also named after General Sheridan. Rushville was set up as the temporary seat of government. In September of 1885 the location of a county seat was submitted to a vote of the people. None of the locations received a majority of the votes. A second election was held in November and declared fraudulent. The county commissioners ordered that the seat be moved to Hay Springs. The case was taken to the Nebraska Supreme Court who ordered that the votes be counted as sent in despite of the fraudulent ruling. By that vote the county seat was located at Rushville.
