v.1  January 1876-December 1877
v.2  April –June 1886

Letter, March 25, 1886 regarding digging ditches (to Reddy)
This small part of the Union Pacific collection (subgroup 21) is on one roll of microfilm. It consists of Telegrams and Letters, written by officers of the Union Pacific, in response to attempts by members of industrial armies of the west to appropriate passenger trains to take them east.

Many of the members of these western armies had originally left the east to take jobs that were thought to be readily available in the west. In 1892, a year before a severe financial depression hit full-force, they were already making attempts, under General Kelly, to force Union Pacific trains to take them east. The telegrams and letters on this roll of microfilm detail the situation of the industrial armies as they move eastward. This correspondence also reflects the attempts of the officers of the Union Pacific to deal with this situation, as various policies are discussed.

This material is designated as Subgroup 21 within the Union Pacific collection. The collection of original papers is available for use upon consultation with the Archivist. The Industrial Armies material is the only part of the collection available both on film and as original papers.
