BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Eli Seavey Ricker was born in rural Maine in September 1843. His family moved to Oneida, Illinois, where he was apparently raised. During the Civil War he served with "I" Co., 102nd Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and rose to the rank of Corporal before his discharge in June 1865. He returned to his Illinois home and began farming. Ricker worked hard but money was in short supply, and in 1866 he journeyed with friends into Kansas, where he apparently took a land claim before returning to Oneida. In 1867 he married the girl, Mary A. Smith, with whom he had corresponded since 1863 but never met until 1866. Ricker had always had a deep desire to obtain more education, and his family lived frugally as he worked his way through two years of college. In 1882 he took his wife and children to Brooklyn, Iowa, where he read law in the office of John T. Scott, and was admitted to the bar in 1884.

In 1885 the family moved to Dawes County, Nebraska, where Ricker set up practice. In 1890 he affiliated himself with the Populist movement, and was elected to the first of three terms as county judge. He then retired briefly before becoming editor of the Chadron Times, from January 1903-February 1905. After 1905 he devoted his remaining years to research on a book which he hoped to write, to be entitled "The Final Conflict Between the Red Man and the Pale Faces." The book never was written because Ricker became engrossed in his research, and in the process amassed a remarkable collection of source material, including interviews with soldiers, Indians, cowboys, trappers, and generally anyone with knowledge of the frontier and frontier incidents. He spent years in the archives of the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs and the War Department, and collected originals and copies of letters, reports and official documents from many sources. E. S. Ricker died at Grand Junction, Colorado, in 1926.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of thirty-five boxes of material and seven reels of microfilm arranged in eight series. The original arrangement, if there was one, has been lost, but materials have been kept in as logical an order as possible.

Series One includes Ricker family correspondence, dating from 1814-1936. The bulk of this series consists of the letters written by and to Eli Seavey Ricker during the Civil War, including a long series of correspondence between Ricker and his future wife, Mary A. Smith. These letters often repeat information to different respondents, but Ricker remains consistent in detail and evidences an interest in preserving his accounts of life in camp and in action during the war. Later letters are mostly to Mary, as Ricker was forced to live away from his family for many years. There is little correspondence for the period during which he was practicing law or editing the Chadron newspaper, and the letters after 1906 relate mostly to his research work in Washington, D.C., and his travels gathering interviews. Letters to Ricker bearing personal narratives or other historical information, include: Edward H. Allison, 1906-1908 (Army life; post duties; the Custer fight, accounts of Gall and Patriarch Crow; White Bull on the death of Lt. Harrington; Custer); W. B. Allison, 1905 (Young Man Afraid of His Horses); W. A. Ballou, 1905 Nebraska militia (Fetterman massacre, and the action of Capt. Ten Eyck); Francis Croft, 1907 (Wounded Knee); Frances D. Ten Eyck, 1906, 1908 (Fetterman massacre, and the actions of Capt. Ten Eyck); J. W. Horncloud, 1903 (Wounded Knee); John W. Ross, 1907 (a version of the Rawhide Creek story); Grenville M. Dodge, 1905 (Ft. Laramie treaty).

Series Two consists of the "Ricker Tablets," a series of more than two hundred school notebook tablets in which Ricker transcribed most of his interviews, as well as: copies of newspaper stories; lists of source materials; notes and extracts from source materials; and personal comments. See the description for a more detailed listing of contents. The interviews are concentrated in tablets 1-48, which have been microfilmed. These seven reels of film should be used instead of the originals.

Series Three consists of interviews, some of them typed and some in longhand. These, like the interviews transcribed in the tablets, were mostly taken by Ricker in meetings with Indians, soldiers, and scouts over a period of years. See the description for a detailed account of contents. This series is on microfilm.

Series Four consists of notes and note cards transcribed by Ricker and by his son, Leslie A. Ricker, from source material in Ricker's possession or note cards, and some are on scraps or sheets of paper. Many are grouped according to subject matter, and are so listed in the description. Also includes Ricker's "Ana" a ledger-size volume with notes and excerpts from a variety of sources, arranged by topic.

Series Five consists of manuscripts. These, written by either one of the Rickers, by a third person, or copied from some other source, are extended accounts of persons and places. See the description for a listing.

Series Six consists of two boxes of primary source material dealing mainly with the re-settlement of the American Indians on lands west of the Mississippi River. Included are originals and copies of all sorts of letters, reports, official records, treaties, and other materials. This material relates to most of the major tribes of Indians across the United States and dates run from the 18th century into the twentieth century.

Series Seven consists of printed matter, 1823-1927 and n.d.

Series Eight consists of miscellaneous material and unidentifiable articles.

This collection was acquired on November 2, 1926, through the efforts of Dr. A. E. Sheldon, then Superintendent of the Nebraska State Historical Society.
