

History Nebraska Access and Use Fee Schedule

Effective January 29, 2024

History Nebraska's (HN) collections are held in trust for the people of the State of Nebraska. Providing access to these collections is central to the agency's mission. Physical access to the vast majority of HN holdings are available free of charge at the Potter Reference Room in Lincoln, Nebraska. Access requests that require staff research, lab work, or other special curatorial assistance may incur fees.

History Nebraska offers both copy services and digitization for collections materials including photographs, documents, portions of published materials (according to copyright limitations), moving images, sound recordings, and images of artifacts. These services and fees may be limited, at HN staff discretion, to ensure long term preservation of original materials. This schedule outlines the fees charged by History Nebraska for low resolution digital copies and for high-resolution digital surrogates of collection materials. Additional sizes and/or formats may be available upon request.

Permission for the use of digital images is documented in an agreement between History Nebraska and the user. For details on History Nebraska guidelines for use see: Use Policy.”
